THE CURSE OF SIX-SEVEN

SUNNY DAY
CHUCK DOWNFIELD

If the Etsy witches from earlier this season are as annoyed with the six-seven trend as most other adults are, it seems they expressed that annoyance by placing a curse on all five ASFL teams with a record of 6-7 last week. With the last playoff spots on the line, every single 6-7 team lost their matchup and fell to 6-8. Season-long stinkers such as Dawn's Early Lightnings, Max the Manx, and The Girly Pops were among the winning teams to spoil the hopes of an aspirational 6-7 team. After the dust settled and the tiebreakers were applied, Matt Tribble's team Disc Golf Lazarus and Mallory DeSantiago's team (both currently on extended losing streaks) were the chosen teams to advance to the post-season. They'll take on Sam Shayer's team All Hope Is Lost and Alan Tribble's team Jasmine's Fav, respectively. Meanwhile, the league's two leading teams (Coren Hucke's Wet Supermen and Daniel Tribble's Gundy Night Football) will be taking a week-long joint team vacation to visit the seaside in hopes of curing their various ailments before they play in the second round of the playoffs.

THIS IS WHERE I'M PUTTING MY COOL CHARTS :)

Hello, Coren here! I'm breaking the journalistic voice schtick for a second because I want to show you my cool charts. I feel like they really show off how artistic I can be. Don't worry, Sunny and Chuck will be back next week with all the exciting storylines from the ASFL playoffs. Cheers to a heck of a regular season!

Ranking by Week

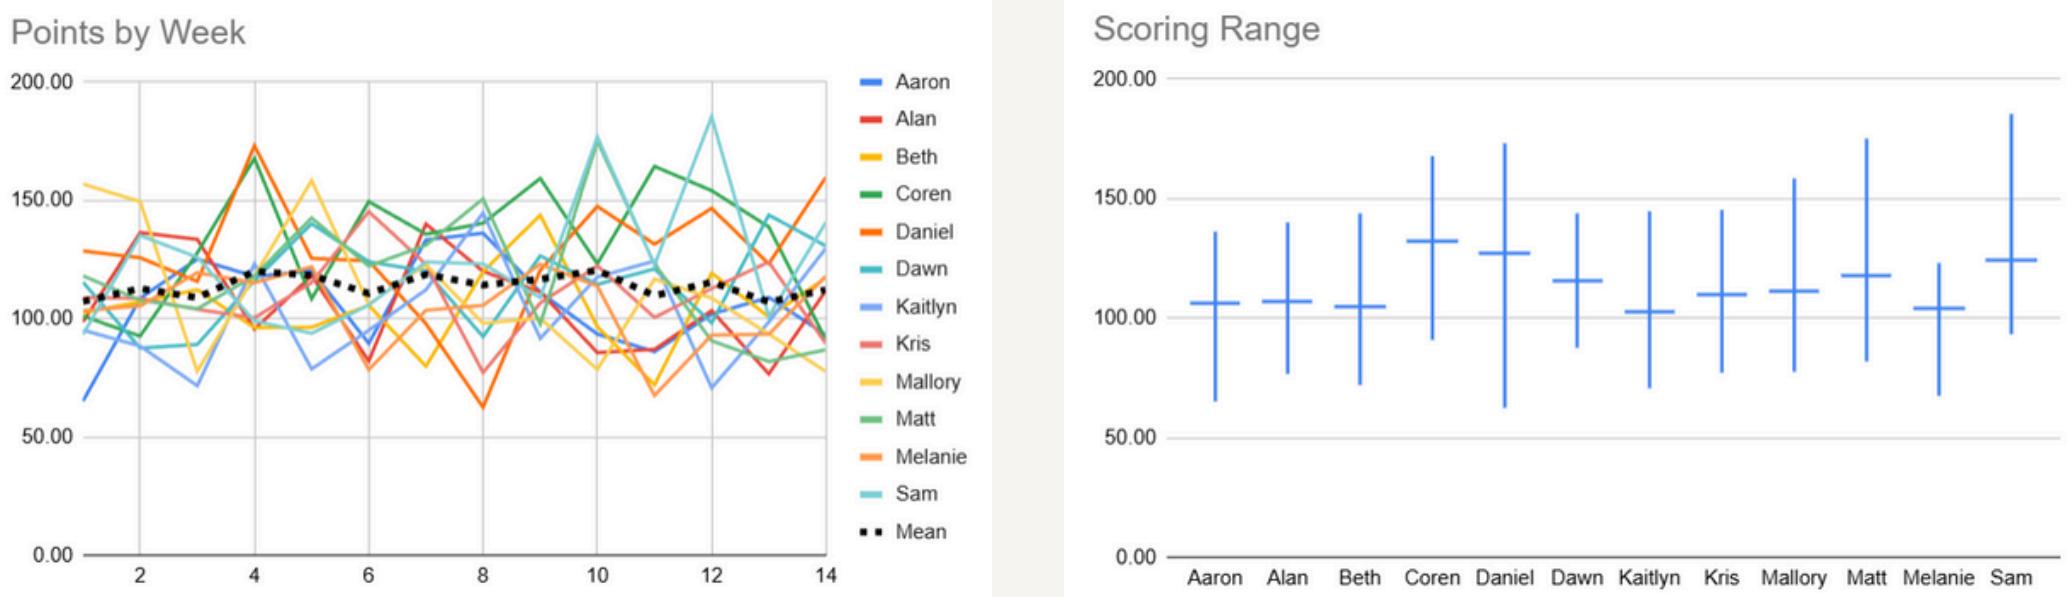

Above: how the league standings have evolved each week of the season. Below: a really poorly formatted but geometrically satisfying chart of wins.

Wins Over .500 by Week

Traffic management video games are another thing that make me feel particularly artistic!

Left: impossible to read jumble of weekly scores. Right: each team's lowest, highest, and average weekly score.

Noteworthies

Baller of the Week: QB Josh Allen (GPOP), 37.84 pts

This week, Josh Allen joined Jonathan Taylor as the only three-time Ballers this regular season. This feat was overshadowed by his team's failure to make the playoffs this time around, a far way to fall from their championship appearance last season. “I'll be back there some day... I'll be back with the vengeance of a thousand scorned Girly Pops.”

Walloping of the Week: Gundy Night Football defeats Jasmine's Fav

A matchup that was nearly meaningless for playoff seeding purposes could have massive importance in the ever-present momentum war. Daniel Tribble's team will ride this resounding win into a playoff bye week, while Alan's team will hope to recover and survive a matchup with Sam Shayer's All Hope Is Lost. “We can take them. I am not afraid,” said Alan fearfully.

Nailbiter of the Week: Coren's Wet Supermen defeat Disc Golf Lazarus

If there were an Anti-Baller of the Week, it would be QB Jalen Hurts (WET), who racked up a ridiculous five (5) turnovers this week. Coren's Wet Supermen squeaked by, but insiders are saying Hurts has lost the confidence of the locker room. Manager Coren Hucke told the press he would reevaluate the starting QB role during the playoff bye.

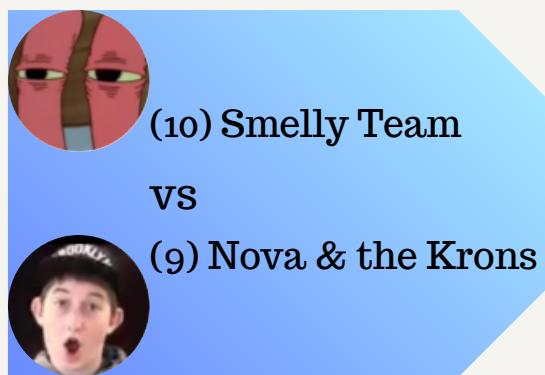

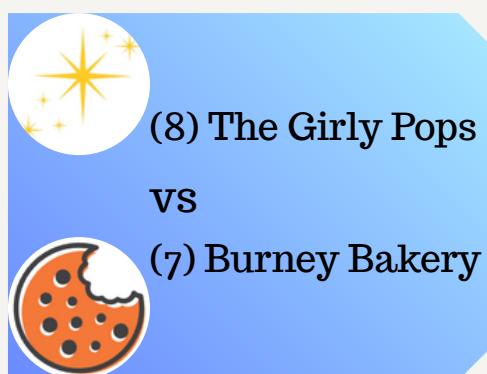

Injury News of the Week:

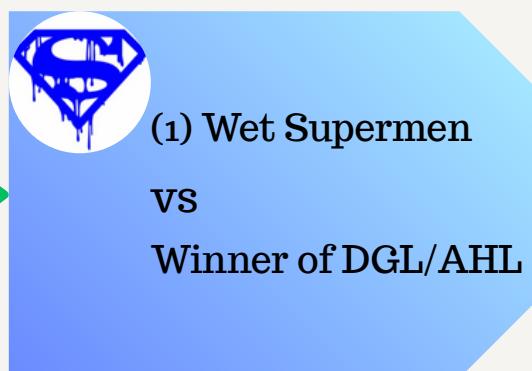

When news broke last week that QB Daniel Jones (NTK) had a fractured fibula, many questioned the wisdom of his decision to continue playing. Those questions were answered when Jones suffered an Achilles tear in a non-contact injury. “I just wanted people to say nice things about me,” said the bravest and most heroic quarterback to ever play the game.
