HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL ARMY FINDS OUT

SUNNY DAY CHUCK DOWNFIELD

It only took until Week 2 for the Chivalrous Knights of Her Majesty's Royal Army to find out what happens when they lose. General manager Lady Melanie Shayer had the tone of a disappointed parent as the team boarded the carriages to leave Meshuggah Stadium in Umeå, Sweden after their loss to the home team, Matt Tribble's Ashton Djenty. "Just wait until we get home," Shayer was overheard saying to her team, "Her Majesty is going to be very cross with you, very cross indeed." One carriage ride past yonder glen later, reports are grim as the team prepares to host Coren Hucke's Fellowship of the Football this week. ASS Page reporters embedded in the kingdom have said that Her Majesty (an anonymous figure of power, not involved in football operations) has taken away all feathery helmets belonging to team members until they have earned them back on the battlefield. No one knows what further punitive measures could come upon future losses.

PROMINENT ASFL ANALYST RETIRES

Frisben McAllen suddenly announced his retirement this Monday. McAllen has been a popular analyst and columnist on the ASFL beat for as long as the league has been around, but some recent embarrassingly wrong takes have made it clear to him that it's time to call it quits. "By every rule of the sport I know, Beth Tribble is a bad manager who should be getting trounced every week," McAllen said in a post announcing the news on Instagram. This year, she leads the league and has averaged over 150 points in the first two weeks. The post continues, "Clearly everything I thought I knew as an expert analyst is wrong, and I have no business writing on this subject ever again." The team here at ASS Page will continue to cover the league no matter what, as we never claimed to be experts in the first place.

Beth Tribble illustrates the pipeline that sends mystical football knowledge directly into her cranium.

Featured Matchup: Ashton Djenty @ Down Under Influencers

As Matt Tribble's team Ashton Djenty heads to Pee Sureman Stadium (67 Walladeez Way, Sydney, Australia) to take on Aaron DeSantiago's Down Under Influencers, there's more at stake than usual. The game has been dubbed the Battle of the Thirds, after RBs James Cook III and Kenneth Walker III. The winner gets a Roman numeral III trophy, while the loser looks like a poser with daddy issues. Hospital Ward WR Luther Burden III was also invited but was busy chasing a butterfly.

Noteworthies

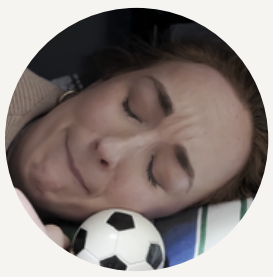

Baller of the Week: WR Jaxon Smith-Njigba (BUZZ), 42.5 pts

The queen bee is responsible for the survival of the hive. She is bigger and more important than the other bees. This phenomenon is similar to Jaxon Smith-Njigba's role this week for Sam Shayer's Buzzin' Buzzers. Smith-Njigba was the obvious power center of the hive, putting up over 40 points while no other teammate had more than 10.

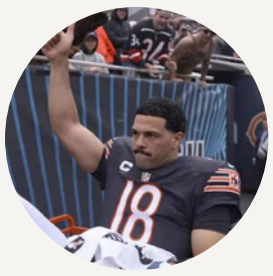

Walloping of the Week: Power Pwincesses 👸 defeat Buzzin' Buzzers

Smith-Njigba's effort was nearly half the total scoring for his team, but it wasn't enough to make a dent in Mallory DeSantiago's Power Pwincesses. DeSantiago was thrilled to be on the opposite side of a walloping this time. "Ja'Maww and the fewwas weawwy pewfowmed weww, I'm vewy pwoud." Next week, Mawwowy's team twavews to pway the Giwwy Pops.

Nailbiter of the Week: Max the Manx defeats A New Dawn

Last week's Featured Matchup didn't disappoint, as the battle for first in the league came down to the wire. Running into the tunnel at halftime, Dawn Burney told reporters, "I've decided to be chill and happy with whatever happens." This was put to the test when her tight end Isaiah Likely began running around with his eyes closed instead of making the winning catch.

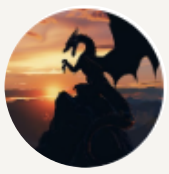

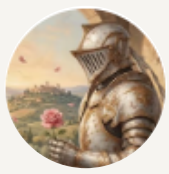

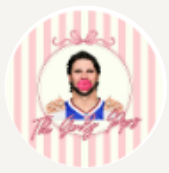

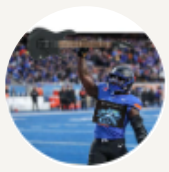

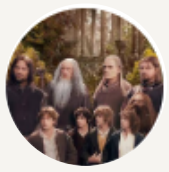

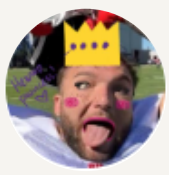

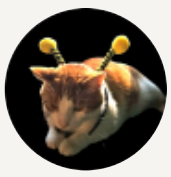

Injury News of the Week: QB Caleb Williams (HW) joins team in the Ward

When a bad person finally gets what's coming to them, it's easy to believe in cosmic justice. Caleb Williams is surely a fine person undeserving of a hamstring injury, but manager Daniel Tribble has been asking for this one for a while. Despite his nefarious deeds, his team sits at a record of 1-1. Reports indicate Williams plans to start his own franchise in the Ward.

Benchwarmer of the Week: QB Jared Goff (JF), 29.78 pts

It's a good thing Brock Purdy had things in order for team Jasmine's Fav, because Jared Goff was on the bench scoring 29.78 points in Block Blast. Nice work, Jared!
