EQUIPMENT INJURY INCIDENT ENGULFS ASFL

SUNNY DAY
CHUCK DOWNFIELD

It was a controversial scene in Salem, Massachusetts this week under the pink dome. Kaitlyn Hucke's team The Girly Pops was hosting Mallory DeSantiago's Power Pwincesses for a good old-fashioned girl power showdown when things took a turn for the worse. Power Pwincesses running back Cam Skattebo was carrying the football down the sideline on a collision course with a Girly Pops defender when he lowered his helmet. The tackle pushed him out of bounds, and his team's signature tiara atop his helmet ended up embedded in Girly Pops backup quarterback Baker Mayfield's thumb. The screams could be heard across the Eastern Seaboard. Luckily, Mayfield is expected to make a full recovery, but that wasn't enough for Hucke to let the incident go. In her post-game press conference, the Girly Pops manager called on commissioner Tribble to ban the Power Pwincesses from wearing their signature tiaras, "before someone more important gets hurt." In a later interview, DeSantiago's rebuttal was, "Aww, did we make Bakew cwy? Did he huwt his wittwe fingew?" Commissionew Twibbwe said the tiawas wewe fuwwy appwoved and wefused to comment fuwthew.

ASS PAGE EDITOR MISUSES PAGE SPACE AGAIN

Look, this job is harder than it looks, alright? So the first article was too long and there isn't enough room for a second one. But guess what? There's still enough room for a fun fact. That's right, did you know that a giraffe's heart weighs about 25 pounds so it is strong enough to pump blood two meters up to its brain? And you can just go to the zoo and see one of those guys.

Talk about elevated blood pressure! And you thought being a fantasy football manager was high-stress.

Featured Matchup: Hospital Ward @ Buzzin' Buzzers

Last year's championship finalists will compete again this week under very different conditions. This time, instead of the Serious Cup being on the line, both teams are fighting to get back to a .500 win-loss record. "It's been a humbling start, that's for sure," said manager Daniel Tribble at a joint presser, "but looking at these medical bills is starting to make me think there are more important things than football." Sam Shayer added, "We should push the insurance man off a bridge."

Noteworthies

Baller of the Week: RB Jahmyr Gibbs (M), 41.4 pts

First-overall draft pick Jahmyr Gibbs proved his worth for team Max the Manx this week, leading his team to another huge win with a staggering 41.4 points. "I couldn't do it without coach Beth," he told press after his performance. "Everybody is out here doubting Beth, but that just motivates the team to prove them wrong. She's very precious to us."

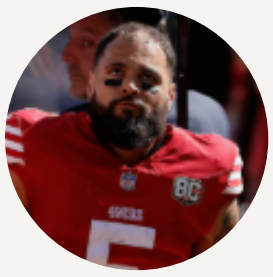

Walloping of the Week: Fellowship of the Football def. Her Majesty's Royal Army

In a defeat of Her Majesty's Royal Army, Coren Hucke's Fellowship of the Football put up a season-high score of 168.78 points in a true team effort with nearly every member contributing over 15 points. Tight end Dalton Schultz was the outlier who didn't pull his weight. "I'll be tossing him down a mine shaft, to rid us of his stupidity," Hucke said after the game.

Nailbiter of the Week: Buzzin' Buzzers defeat A New Dawn

The narrowest margin of the week was still a convincing 20-pt takedown, with the Buzzin' Buzzers defeating A New Dawn. Manager Dawn Burney's bad luck continued with this matchup, while Sam Shayer got his first win of the season. Reporters asked Shayer if the win meant he still had hope, or whether it was all lost, and he only replied, "Hope... finds a way."

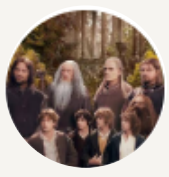

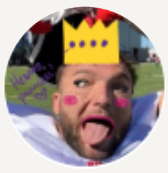

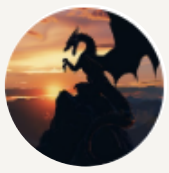

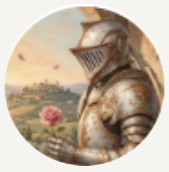

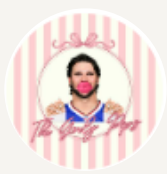

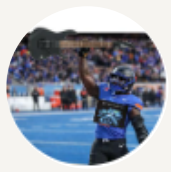

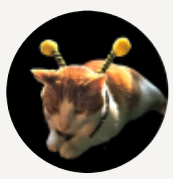

Injury News of the Week: WR Mike Evans (DEB) fractures rib

Swords were banned in A New Dawn's stadium after The Incident, but that wasn't enough to keep all the players healthy this week. Wide receiver Mike Evans collided with team mascot Dubious the Dragon and had to be carted to the locker room by the ambulance unicorn. Luckily for Evans, the medical staff fairies are very talented and he should be healthy soon.

Benchwarmer of the Week: TE Brock Bowers (FotF), 27.6 pts

Manager Coren Hucke wasn't expecting Bowers to arrive this week and embarrassingly didn't have his uniform on hand. The star TE scored 27.6 points in Bejeweled Blitz instead.
